Subject: air and noise pollution in California State Parks
Comment:

According to Todd Y. Thames, Superintendent of Support Services for The Dept. of Parks and Recreation in a letter mailed to me dated 12/5/07 he states, According to the California Air Resources Board (CARB),portable generators meet California emissions and noise standards. Did CARB test all motor homes (RV's) and all manufactures of portable generators for noise and air pollution? In Title 14 of the California Code of Regulations, Section 4320(c), it states generators can be used for 10 hours straight per day,from 8pm to 10am. These are gas powered and they produce noise. The State Parks are saying CARB does not see this as a problem. 400 camp sites 200 generators running for 10 hours a day, we might as well camp on the side of a major freeway. I think CARB should re-think what CARB has reported to The Dept. of Parks and Recreation.CARB needs to test these RV's and portable generators for noise and air pollutions.

Subject: Emission Control Regulations
Comment:

To whom it may concern,

I am writing to encourage the Board members to consider adopting new regulations requiring the sale of a specific percentage of zero-emissions vehicles. The Board adopted similar regulations years ago, but later reversed direction. I urge you to reconsider such regulations for several reasons including, but not limited to, the following: 1) The technology has existed for some time to produce such vehicles, 2) the previous experiment with zero-emissions vehicles was not allowed to succeed, 3) the pluggin-hybrid technology has proven that there are batteries capable of extending the range of electric vehicles, 4) there is a demand for such vehicles as demonstrated by the waiting lists for hybrid vehicles, 5) zero-emissions vehicles, if circulated widely enough, can help reduce the emissions produced in California and have a beneficial effect on the environment and people's health. I urge you to consider such requirements, if not in the regulations currently under consideration, then soon. I would like the next vehicle I purchase to be a zero-emissions vehicle. Please help make this wish come true.

Respectfully,

Apostolos (Paul) Samaras
