Subject: Small Volume Manufacturers cert fees
Comment:

CARBs proposal for fixed cert fees is not unreasonable. I would however urge that the level of fees be adjusted more in line with the volumes to be sold rather than a fixed fee. It is noted that a reduced fee is proposed for "carry over" and "Small Businesses". There are some, a very few, manufacturers or importers who may only be retailing some 100's of vehicles in California but whom do not meet the "Small Business" classification.

I should like to ask CARB to consider extending the reduced fees to include these low volume manufacturers. The volume limit could be set at the existing 4500pa low volume limit or a reduced number, say 2250pa, if that was felt more appropriate.

Thank you.

Comment:

Can you guys focus your efforts on the scientific ideas of "Carrying Capacity" instead of charging people more who have been here for generations, promoting good stewardship of the environment, and who do not have a significant carbon footprint? Is that possible to have a conversation focused on those topics, versus trying to phase things out simply by charging more for them?

You're not going to listen, so I'll make it short. Please stop with the insanity. CARB is destroying businesses in a time where the rest of California politics is already destroying us. Enough.

Subject: CARB Cert & Compliance Fee Proposed Rule
Comment:

OPEI respectfully submits the attached comments in opposition of the proposed certification and compliance fees rule.

Due to ongoing Small Off-Road Engine (SORE) rulemaking activities, which will have a dramatic impact on the sector as early as model year 2024, including the number of EOs that will be issued and the sales volume of product covered by EOs, OPEI requests CARB to exempt SORE from the proposed certification and compliance rule at this time.

Additionally, the rulemaking package incorrectly estimates the volume of SORE product subject to certification and compliance, and as a result significantly underestimates the cost-impact to consumers.
