Comment:

I oppose all plans for tropical forest offsets. The validity of such "offsets" is questionable at best. They fail to meet CARB's standards that offsets must be real, quantifiable, and enforceable. And with Brazil about to elect a right wing anti-environmentalist, Amazon rain forest offsets will be just a sham, little different from such offsets in other countries.

Strong Support for CARB Endorsing the Draft California Tropical Forest Standard

Public comment from Earth Innovation Institute

The Earth Innovation Institute strongly supports the California Air Resources Board endorsing the draft California Tropical Forest Standard as a step toward integrating international jurisdictional sector-based offsets for reducing emissions from deforestation and forest degradation into the California cap-and-trade program.

In the attached letter of support, we:

- i) describe the importance of the Standard in the larger context of solving climate change; and
- ii) offer specific points of feedback on elements of the draft Standard with the goal of approving the strongest possible final Standard.

Subject: Stand with Indigenous allies, say no to tropical forest offsets -- Notice of Availability and Public Comment Period For the California Tropical Forest Standard and Draft Environmental Analysis

Dear California Air Resources Board Officials,

As a California resident, I am writing to urge you to reject and withdraw the deeply flawed California Tropical Forest Standard and to ensure that these offsets never are accepted into California's carbon trading system. In the name of our climate, health and wildlife, we must act as quickly as possible to keep fossil fuels in the ground right here in California. That means requiring industrial polluters to make deeper greenhouse gas cuts at their own facilities rather than certifying carbon-offset schemes in jurisdictions thousands of miles away.

Specifically, I urge you to abandon this plan for the following reasons:

1) Carbon offsets allow big emitters in California to keep polluting, often in low-income communities of color, instead of reducing their carbon footprint. They perpetuate pollution hotspots and prevent California from taking real action on climate change. To prevent the worst effects of climate change, we can't afford to make way for carbon offsets that enable fossil fuel companies to continue polluting in California. Our carbon budget for preventing devastating climate change harms is nearly spent. And with offsets, some industrial polluters in California will emit more greenhouse gas pollution--and for longer--than they would otherwise be allowed in the absence of those offsets.

2) We know that the greenhouse gas pollution from industry is very often accompanied by other pollutants that worsen air quality. We must cut carbon pollution at its source here in California to ensure the health and safety of our communities.

3) Tropical forest carbon offsets lack integrity and are impossible to police across national borders. Similar schemes resembling the draft California Tropical Forest Standard have failed to prove reliable with their carbon accounting and guaranteed permanence. To make matters worse, these offset programs have a poor track record of actually reducing deforestation. For these reasons, no compliance market in the world accepts tropical forest carbon credits, and California should not be the first. We can do better.

4) Tropical forest offset programs threaten the rights of indigenous peoples in the Amazon and beyond, placing forest peoples at risk of displacement and losing control of their territories, their cultures, and their ways of life. In places like Brazil and Indonesia, they have a disturbing track record of disrupting indigenous communities and the surrounding forest ecosystems.

For all these reasons, I urge you to reject the draft California Tropical Forest Standard and to commit to ending new permits for oil and gas projects in California. If California wants to be a real climate leader, it must do better than "offsetting" pollution. We must address the primary cause of climate change: fossil fuel extraction and combustion. Our climate, health, and wildlife can't afford the grave threat of continued fossil fuel development.

Thank you for your consideration of my comments. Please do NOT add my name to your mailing list. I will learn about future developments on this issue from other sources.

Sincerely,
Christopher Lish
San Rafael, CA

We as Civil Society Organization in Ivory Coast express a deep concern about the FPIC process.

The fact that the technical document is only available in english is very problematic for the comminities.Then the technical document in English need to be address in French before any implementations of program or project in Cavally and Belier provinces in Ivory Coast.

Re: Comments on the California Tropical Forest Standard: Criteria for Assessing Jurisdictional-Scale Programs that Reduce Emissions from Tropical Deforestation

Dear Mr. Gray:

I am submitting comments as an individual and not as a representative of Stanford University or any other organization. I am a research scientist with decades of experience in studies of the global carbon cycle and quantifying ecosystem carbon stocks.

I have evaluated the draft California Tropical Forest Standard and am writing to encourage the California Air Resources Board to endorse the Standard.

My reading of the technical literature and my own research together convince me that available and affordable technologies have the necessary accuracy, precision, and availability to provide high-confidence in reported carbon stocks and stock changes, especially at the jurisdictional scale. I do not feel that concerns about the potential accuracy of reporting and verification should prevent approval of the standard. Reporting and verification involve important technical challenges, but the available technology can deal with these effectively, at reasonable costs.

Sincerely,

Christopher Field
