Comment:

I am writing to point out, again, that investment and jobs in "greentech" induced by AB 32 implementation are properly categorized as a COST, not a BENEFIT, of the proposed implementation of AB 32. This confusion on your part is a deceptive and fatal flaw in your entire economic analysis.

CARB would be well advised to correct this flaw and resubmit an accurate economic analysis.

Subject: Availability of models?
Comment:

Is it possible to get the underlying spreadsheet models that were used to produce the cost and savings estimates in the App I, Model Documentation?

Also, how do we get a working copy of EDRAM, as it is stated that it's publicly available?

Subject: Cost Benefit Analysis

Comment:

I am deeply concerned about the cost to implement and the short term (3 to 5 year) economic impact. Was a short term economic impact analysis done and if so where can I find the information. If the short term economic impact has not been considered, it needs to be. Small business owners must know what the costs are to them and can not wait 20 years for the benefit.
