Jason Barbose

To: Mary Nichols, Chair, California Air Resources Board

Extend the Low Carbon Fuel Standard to 2030

California's Low Carbon Fuel Standard (LCFS) is one of the state's most successful policies for reducing global warming emissions from transportation. By lowering the overall carbon intensity of our state's fuel supply, this policy at once reduces emissions directly, and supports technological advancements that will define the future of clean transportation.

We support the board in adopting staff's proposal to extend the policy to 2030 and double the emissions reduction target from a 10 percent reduction in average fuel carbon intensity in 2020 to a 20 percent reduction in 2030. This will send a clear message to the market for low carbon fuels that demand will grow steadily over the long term.

By setting steadily growing long term goals, the LCFS supports innovation and progress across the transportation fuel sector. By adopting these amendments, extending the LCFS to 2030 and doubling the emissions reduction targets, the California Air Resources Board will be speeding California on its way to a clean transportation future.
