Ventura young, California resident since birth and avid car enthusiast since I could understand what a car was

These new rules are out of hand and absolutely absurd no ecu tunes what does an ecu tune check do there's no way for cars to run better if you ban something to help burn fuel better and sometimes when people buy used cars they're tuned or have been do those fail too even without prior knowledge I understand not having one of you have a highly modified car where it shouldn't be on the street but a car with a tune with no upgrades can significantly help improve the burn of fuel do some research on tuning before just assuming an upgrade is bad and have professionals tell you not someone that most likely calls someone to change their own tire. Cars have also been known to get better gas mileage with tunes so please don't make poor decisions based on a uneducated person's knowledge of a subject.
