Hello - The CARB will continue California's lead on addressing climate change with a strong ACT regulation. Requiring that by 2030, at least 30% (preferably more) of the new trucks on California's roads are all electric, zero emission vehicles.

Interestingly (& sadly) we are seeing an intersection between COVID-19 and air quality. Preliminary research shows a strong correlation between PM 2.5 and significant jump in COVID-related hospitalizations. The links between protecting public health and minimizing climate change impacts are becoming stronger. And with a regulation shifting the direction of truck fuel, we stimulate economic activity, much needed now and going forward.

best wishes,

Martha Turner
